~Independence Day Trivia~

Did you know.....?

That the only Declaration of Independence signers to become president, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, died on the same day: July 4th, 1826.

Also, on the 4th of July, 1776, the Continental Congress signed and adopted the Declaration of Independence.

~Celebrating The American Flag~

The American Flag is not merely a symbol of our country, its design conveys past history and future goals.

When Continental Congress proposed that the United States have a national flag instead of the British Union Jack, it was determined that 13 stars would represent the 13 new states. We take the stars from heaven, the red from our mother country, separate it by white in stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her...and so the Stars and Stripes of the American Flag were created and have been flown proudly over the years through war and peace.

The Rolling Hills Staff would like to wish everyone a safe and wonderful 4th of July!

The Origination of Fireworks

*Fireworks were originally invented by the Chinese, for entertainment purposes, as an extension of the Chinese invention of gunpowder. They were first made by firework masters (pyrotechnicians) who were well respected for their knowledge and skill of the many complex techniques used to create firework displays. Displays are common throughout the world and are the focal point of many different cultural and religious celebrations! (Like our celebration of our Independence Day~ The 4th of July!!) China is also the largest manufacturer and exporter of fireworks in the entire world!
